LIGHT RECEIPTS OVER WEEK-END

MACKEREL NETTERS WERE OUT,
BUT NONE OF THE FLEET
FOUND FISH.

Arrivals of fresh fish since Saturday's market, were few, being confined to three draggers, one from off-shore with a small catch and the other two from the shore. Mackerel netters were out last night, but practically none of the boats took fish, and those that did only had a handful and not enough to report. A large cargo of salt fish from the Faro Islands, in excess of 3,000,000 pounds, which has been expected here since Saturday for the Gorton-Pew Fisheries Company, had not arrived at noon today. Gill netters found good fishing Saturday and yesterday, several nice fares of pollock being landed at the splitters.

N. F. Codfish.

Some of the codfish markets are reported to have shown weakness, whilst others are steady. As November and December are usually the best months of the year for dried codfish in European markets, it is possible that any anticipated decline has been brought about by over supplies. Norway and Iceland are aggressive competitors in Oporto yet that market sustains a favorable demand for Newfoundland. The great trouble seems to be that we
